

month internship, I was given the target area of the Caribbean. Project development work would consist of searching the internet for conservation and community based organisations that would be applicable to the Frontier mission statement. To establish feasibility and initiate a partnership, I would have to construct personalised emails to set up a dialogue. It was also important to carry out competitor price analysis as there are several non-governmental organisations (across the international volunteering, conservation and travel sectors), which might be working on similar projects. Once contact had been made, the next step would be

Working at Frontier has been valuable, as I have been given the opportunity to gain
